Ah TRS-80's with a cassette recorder. Had to learn a little basic just to sell the damn things when I worked for Radio Shack. Amazing that you could sell those computers to business based on a little lunar lander program.

At home I was a traitor with my IBM PC Jr. but that didn't last long as I finally got myself a Compaq with dual 5.5" floppy drives and 640K memory. They asked me what I would need all that memory for when I bought it, was I running a business?

Been fascinated with them since. From big VAX's down to my iPhone. It's the www.Geek4.me world for this guy!

Nice site.

Wish I could work on my webhosting sites more.... just too much to do with the "real job" and the part time job and the family...
